The capital stock is $35,000. The new company will succeed Stiles & Tucker in the publication of the Daily and Weekly Farmer.

Negotiations for the purchasing of the Exchange building, corner of Church and Chapel streets, are being made by Attorney George D. Watrous. Architect L. W. Robert has been commissioned by the proposed purchasers to make plans and estimates for the reconstruction of the building, which will include some important additions and many improvements. A large addition is to be built on to the rear and the hall on the third floor is to be converted into offices. An elevator, steam heating and new plumbing are also projected. It is expected the improvements will be completed during the summer. The building, or that part of it which is to be sold, is now owned by Dr. Robert Forbes of Brooklyn, his sister, Mrs. Honker of New York, and the heirs of the late Mrs. Charlotte R. Downer. The building is to be bought by the heirs in number, and include Representative W. F. Downer of Hamden and Mrs. George D. Watrous. The price which is to be paid for the interest owned by Dr. Forbes and Mrs. Hawkes is not given.

An Organized Gang Engaged in a Moon Business.
Ansonia, May 22.—A new kind of devilry has lately sprung up, and the prospect is that it will lead to a combination of the bicycle riders, and their efforts will be pooled to discover the authors of the work. Within the past week riders who have left their wheels on Main street for a short time have found on returning that the tires have been punctured. At first it was thought to have been accidental, but it has become so frequent that there is no doubt that some person or persons are making a practice of puncturing tires whenever an opportunity offers.

The most common way of doing the work is to use a sharp-pointed tack, and in several cases the tack has been left in the tire. At other times it is pulled out and the puncture is found only after searching. It is a mean trick and owners of wheels are talking of raising a fund to be used in efforts to find the perpetrators and bring them before the courts.

ANOTHER CAPTAIN KIDD YARN.

The following story comes from Bridgeport and is considered here a canard. It is stated that the story will never be denied, and it is asserted with equal confidence that the truth of the story can never be established.

A big stir prevails in Bridgeport over the news, just out, of the finding of some of Captain Kidd's treasure by two Bridgeporters who a short time ago hadn't a cent, but are now blazing with diamonds and buying bonds and New York city real estate. Everybody in Bridgeport is talking about it, from the kitchen maids to the wealthiest nabobs. Tradition has long maintained that Point No Point, on Stratford harbor, was the spot where Captain Kidd, "the sea devil," as he was called, put in one dark, tempestuous night when he was being pursued, or fancied he was, and hid spoils and booty of immense value, depositing it there encased in a big iron chest. It is a matter of history that in the year 1800, under authority and by discretion of the town of Weston, whose treasury was then sadly in need of bonds, a big search for this alleged fabulous amount of treasure supposed to be hid in the sands of Point No Point, was made by five vigorous, able-bodied freeholders, but they searched and searched to no avail. P. T. Barnum once made strenuous efforts to obtain possession of Point No Point by buying it from the town of Stratford, but was unsuccessful. He always thought that some of the Kidd treasure was buried there. The town of Stratford in 1886 sold the Point to Walter Nichols of Bridgeport for $50,000, and he in turn sold it to its present owners, McMahon & Wren, the millionaire brewers, for $100,000.

One day last October two well known Bridgeport characters, "Curly" Dart and "Bill" Hodge, for many years locally famous as clam-diggers, disappeared suddenly from their old haunts. Their disappearance was a nine-days' wonder. Last Saturday, however, great was the astonishment of their old acquaintances and the townspeople in general to see "Curly" and "Bill" back again and dressed like lords. Amusement grew when on the immaculate shirt front of each was seen a big, blazing diamond, and when they were seen to have each a massive gold watch chain, while from their respective pockets they hauled out big handfuls of shining gold coin of the realm, which they scattered about with lavish prodigality in treating the boys in the saloons which they were wont to haunt. "Bill" and "Curly" kept mum for a time, expecting to return and project some more for hidden treasure, but when mellowed they let the secret out, and to doubters and scoffers they fished out of their pockets old gold coins of foreign mintage, massive old gold medals bearing all sorts of legendary inscriptions and studded with diamonds and other precious stones. McMahon & Wren, owners of the Point, have in vain tried to make the lucky Monte Cristo tell where they dug up the wealth, even threats of prosecution failing. "Curly" and "Bill" have sold and delivered their spoils to New York parties, and each has bought a house on West Thirty-second street, New York, and invested the balance of the proceeds in government 3½ per cent. bonds and stock of the Bridgeport Traction company.

HELD IN NEW BRITAIN.

Tenth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Congregational Home Missionary Union, Yesterday.

The tenth annual meeting of the Woman's Congregational Home Missionary Union was held yesterday in New Britain, with a large attendance of women from its auxiliaries. The opening exercises, conducted by Rev. Dr. Cooper, were followed by reports from the secretaries and treasurer, after which stirring addresses were made by Rev. W. B. D. Gray of Yankton college, and Dr. Cobb of the C. C. B. society. A beautiful collation was served by the ladies of the South and First churches.

Addresses in the afternoon were from Miss Collins, who made an earnest appeal for the education of the Indian boys and girls in Dakota, and Mrs. Caswell, who showed in her inimitable way the missionaries' life and work, its needs, its privations, its hopefulness; and from Miss Camp, the president of the union, all of which were full of interest. The Home Missionary union, whose object is to aid in the evangelization of our land by cordial support of the five national societies and the Missionary society of Connecticut, was organized at Memorial hall, Hartford, in 1885. Its contributions in the ten years have a total of $53,006.51, of this amount the H. M. society of Connecticut has had $1,006.36, A. M. A. $9,287.01, C. B. society $3,451.33, Congregational Ed. society $4,697.82, N. W. Ed. commission $7,036.90, L. L. and Rep. society $1,277.47, Congregational H. M. society $16,408.21.

Another Flannel Fuss

Thursday, we turn the flash light on Flannels again. Take them while the light is on. Light price. Heavy Flannels. Maybe you'd buy them for as little as 10c. a yd. any day in the week. Maybe you wouldn't. We bought them—2101½ yds. of Outing Flannels—so that you need pay but 6¼c. a yd. A miserably faint figure for firm flannels.

Soft, fluffy-faced flannel in stripes, plaids, checks and plain colors, full 29 inches wide, tip-top for Dressing Sacks, Children's Dresses, Night Gowns or Men's Outing Shirts.

Sale begins Thursday at 9:30 A. M. sharp. 6¼ instead of 10c. a yd.
